John Walker recalled as generous community leader

PENNY COLES

Niagara Advance
John Walker, one of Niagara's most distinguished entrepreneurs and generous philanthropists, died at his home last Thursday, surrounded by his family.

As the fourth-generation former co-owner of Walker Industries with his brother Norris, he was known in the region for his generosity in many areas, both through the family business and personally.

While health care and the arts were often the beneficiaries of his public altruism, those who knew him say his giving was never about recognition, and he was quick to quietly help out anyone in need.

Jackie Phelan, his personal assistant for more than 20 years, said Walker's philanthropy was a family legacy, something he learned from his parents John and Nora - a legacy that will continue with the next generation.

But it also came from the deep caring within that he held for other people.

"He had a boundless capacity to care for everyone he touched," she said.

And he touched a lot of people, "more than we'll ever know."
If he heard someone had a problem, he wanted to help, she said.

"His heart was open, and he listened. He heard what people were saying, and if he could do something about it he would."

His faith was important to him, she said, as was his business, but family was his first priority.

"I often heard him speak at private functions, and he would say that being a father came first, business second."

In his work, she said, "he had a great ability to see the future."

He developed Niagara Waste Systems as a solution for the rehabilitation of the worked-out area of the quarry on the border of Thorold and Niagara Falls, and in the case of the Vineland Quarries, an award-winning vineyard.

He had a clear vision, said Phelan, of taking the empty quarries and doing something positive with them.

And when he tackled something, she said, "he thought big, and he taught me to think big. He wanted experiences to be memorable, and he wanted to create big memories, but he never forgot the little details."

She points to the Touch-A-Truck events he sponsored at Niagara College. He and his wife Carol had seen something similar on a much smaller scale, with emergency vehicles for kids to see up close, when they were visiting their grandchildren in the U.S.

"Carol wanted to do something similar here, and John said, 'I know where we can get some vehicles.'"

The event, held every other year, not only brings together emergency vehicles but includes a variety of huge Walker Industry construction machines, dump trucks and more, raising money for children's literacy projects.

But just as important to John, said Phelan, was creating memories for the little boy who was going to have the opportunity to sit in one of those construction vehicles.

In Niagara-on-the-Lake, where John and Carol lived, they were well-known and highly regarded for their support of the Shaw Festival.

'He was a philanthropist at heart'

Jill Planché, retired now, was director of show development for the Shaw during the years when it had an aggressive capital campaign to build the new production centre and also build up an endowment fund.

"He was a tremendous ally during those years. He thought like a philanthropist, and he would sit quietly and listen, and then he would offer his advice. Apart from his own generosity, it was his advice that he could offer, because he was a philanthropist at heart, that I'll be eternally grateful for."

Planché said she worked in the fundraising field for 35 years, and met a lot of good people, "but with John, you knew he was giving from his heart. He talked a lot about growing up with philanthropy, and the importance of giving back to your community. To him it wasn't just about money. It was a way of living and thinking of others. There was always a thoughtfulness to his giving, and he was a great resource for advice."

He was also a major sponsor of the popular Shaw Festival Film Series, which brings critically acclaimed films and documentaries to the Festival Theatre during the winter.

When the idea was first conceived, with Carol at the helm, there was no money for a projection system. John, says Planché, offered to lend the money to purchase it.

"I'm sure he never expected to get it back, but we were able to return it. And he promptly gave it back to us," said Planché. "I was very fond of him. He'll be missed."

There were many other beneficiaries of his generosity, both in time and financial donations.

He received dozens of entrepreneurial and achievement awards, and served as chair or member of several boards including the Shaw Festival, Shearer Hospital, Knox Presbyterian Church, Ridley College, AIDS Niagara, the YMCA, the Niagara Peninsula Children's Centre Foundation and was honorary chair of the St. Catharines General Hospital Foundation's Breakthrough Health Care campaign.

He was also an Executive in Residence at Brock University, where in 2001, he was bestowed with a honorary doctorate; and he was awarded the Golden Jubilee Medal honoring his many philanthropic achievements.

He was the honorary co-chair of the It's Our Time campaign for the new St. Catharines hospital, which raised more than $40 million, and was a member of the Niagara-on-the-Lake arm of the fundraising committee that successfully met its target of $2.6 million.

But perhaps the gift he and his family will be best remembered for was the donation of $5 million toward the construction of the Niagara Regional Cancer Centre at the new hospital in St. Catharines. It was the largest private donation ever made in Niagara and was given by the Walker family and Walker Industries, under the leadership of John and Norris.

"John Walker was an exemplary leader, and his decades of service to health care helped to build a stronger Niagara. His generosity and vision will continue to have an impact long into the future," said the NHB's OneFoundation board chairman Joe Maggilo.

Local businessman Archie Katzman was co-chairman with Walker of the Niagara North branch of the It's Our Time campaign, but more than that, Katzman says, he considered Walker a mentor and a friend. "He was everything you could want in a friend," said Katzman.

"He was a real gentleman all the way through. With John, a handshake was always enough. He was just a great guy, and it was a real honour for me to be co-chair with him."

John was the husband of Carol Walker and father of David, Wendy, Ian and George and stepfather to Sarah and Rachel, and leaves also his former wife Peggy. He is survived by numerous grandchildren, brother Norris (late Marilyn) and the late David F. Walker.

A celebration of his life will be held at Ridley College Memorial Chapel, Sunday, June 5 at 1:30 p.m., with a reception to follow in the Great Hall at Ridley.

The family asked that memorial donations be made to the Niagara Historical Society, 43 Castlereagh St., NOTL.

Former lawn bowling site to be park recognizing black settlers

SUZANNE MASON
Special to the Advance

The former site of the lawn bowling club in the Old Town will be turned into a park to commemorate the contributions of settlers who came to the area through the Underground Railroad.

The fate of the Regent Street property was a major issue after the recent municipal election. The new council decided to sell it for residential development. That decision was reversed by the new council following requests by residents to keep the land for public use.

The community and development advisory committee voted unanimously Monday to budget up to $40,000 that will include a detailed landscape design and further public consultation for the new park.

"Currently there are few places in town that testify to black history in the area including loyalist settlers, freedom seekers, slavery, the Underground Railroad and the first Emancipation Act in Upper Canada," staff reported. "This park could serve as a central location to pay tribute to and connect this history in our municipality."

The committee approved a recommendation by Coun. Jim Collard that a piece of artwork also be installed in the new park that would celebrate the freedom of the Underground Railway represented.

A request for quotations for hiring a landscape architect will be prepared by staff and at least two public consultations will be held on the proposed designs. Staff suggested themes that could be incorporated into the design are the struggle to settle and become established in a new community, the importance of dialogue in overcoming injustice and the journey to emancipation.

"It will be something we (councillors) will all be remembered for," said Coun. Betty Disero, noting the need for awareness of black history along with the town's commemoration of other groups and individuals, such as the indigenous people and Laura Secord, during the War of 1812.

Harper, Nicholson 'were a good fit'

RAY SPITERI
Postmedia Network

Niagara Falls MP Rob Nicholson will not follow his former boss Stephen Harper into political retirement.

Nicholson, who Harper entrusted with several high-profile cabinet posts during his nearly 10 years as prime minister, said he intends to fulfill his obligation to voters and complete the rest of his term in office.

"There's no question about that. I'm extremely grateful to the people of Niagara Falls, Fort Erie and Niagara-on-the-Lake for giving me this opportunity," said Nicholson.

"I've had the opportunity to represent our interests in Ottawa.

"I have a private member's bill that will be up for debate in another week or so for a national strategy with respect to Alzheimer's and dementia, so I'm very pleased to be associated with that."

Nicholson is a 20-year federal politician and is an elder statesman in the Conservative party.

He was an integral part of the Conservative government during the past nine years before the party was defeated by Justin Trudeau's Liberals in October.

Under Harper's prime ministership, Nicholson was appointed Canada's leader of the government in the House of Commons, minister responsible for government reform, justice minister and attorney general, defence minister, and foreign affairs minister.

Nicholson said he appreciated the confidence Harper placed in him during the years.

He said Harper "epitomized great leadership" as prime minister and guided the Conservative party to three consecutive election victories.

"We were a good fit," said Nicholson.

"On the justice portfolio, he always took the side of victims and law-abiding Canadians.

"On foreign affairs, he was very clear as to where he stood and against what Russia was doing. He stood on behalf of Israel, and stood up to ISIL.

"And with respect to the economy, very careful in government spending. He believed in balanced budgets, and we returned the budget to a balanced position before the (October) election.

"He was completely consistent, and I agreed with the different approaches that he took."

Harper will resign as MP by the fall to pursue business interests and look to establish a foreign policy institute, according to media reports.

Harper won't return as MP for the fall sitting of Parliament, as he considers multiple offers in the corporate sector.

Nicholson was flying to British Columbia Thursday to take part in the party's national convention in Vancouver. In the afternoon, he was scheduled to attend a caucus meeting, while Harper was scheduled to speak to thousands of Conservative supporters on Thursday evening.

Nicholson predicted Harper would be received with "an overwhelmingly warm support of welcome from the delegates."

After being re-elected MP this past fall, Nicholson was named the party's justice critic after an unsuccessful bid to become interim leader of the Tories after Harper resigned as party head.

Despite the party's defeat in October, Nicholson said he believes the Tories are in Rob Nicholson has work left to do before thinking about retiring as Conservative MP for the Niagara riding.

"pretty good shape.

"We came out of this election after a loss with 100 seats. And other than Atlantic Canada, where we're going to have to make up some ground, we had distribution of our seats right across the country," he said.

"I think we're in a good position for the next federal campaign."

Point of View

Wynne can't force MPPs to resign

The manner in which Premier Kathleen Wynne and her Liberal government have handled allegations of sexual harassment is a head-scratcher for many Queen's Park observers. First came the bombshell that two MPPs had been forced to quit the legislature over allegations of sexual harassment. We were told we couldn't know their names for legal reasons and to protect the victims. Then one of the victims went public and named former Niagara Falls MPP Kim Craiton as the person she'd made allegations about. He denied any wrongdoing. Reporters naturally wanted more details.

Who produced the report on these allegations?

Where's the report? Why can't we see it?

They've lied to us before. They'll lie again.

Where's the transparency?

We have no idea what Craiton — and whoever the other person who was forced to quit — allegedly did.

This is an entirely inappropriate way to deal with democratically elected parliamentarians.

Technically, Craiton did not work for Wynne and the Liberal Party. He worked for the people of Niagara Falls who elected him. It would have been appropriate for Wynne to expel Craiton from caucus, but forcing him to quit his seat in the legislature is not her prerogative.

In some ways it's very undemocratic. Based on a report that she won't make public, Wynne is overturning the will of the electorate by demanding the resignation of a duly elected MPP.

Craiton was a renegade Liberal from the time he was elected. He often was at odds with his own party on politics. Yet he was very popular in his Niagara Falls riding and would likely have been to run successfully as an independent.

For all we know, Wynne's "investigation" might have been a kangaroo court. Or the investigation may never have happened. I'm not saying that's the case. I'm just saying we don't know.

This becomes all the more hypocritical when you consider that former Liberal premier David Peterson — Matthews' brother-in-law — faces a sexual harassment claim by a former manager at the Pan Am Games.

While the allegations have not been proven in court, you'd have thought the Liberal Party would suspend Peterson's party membership pending the outcome of the lawsuit, which they have not done.

A double-standard? You bet. But par for the Liberal course.

Do you remember?

FROM THE COLLECTION OF JIM SMITH

Niagara's No.1 Company posed for a photo in the Market Square - the white building on the left is the present Angel Inn 150 years ago when they answered the call to help repel the Fenian Raid of June 1866. A gravel train that had been working the Stamford pits was commandeered to take the soldiers from Niagara to Chippewa. Jim Smith says his great-grandfather, along with Kevin Sherlock's and Albert Davey's, were among these men.

Letters to the Editor

Support for challenge to Minister of Energy

Thank goodness for people like Jim Ryan (Niagara Advance, May 19) for trying to hold the despicable Liberal government accountable for its abysmal handling of the province's electricity portfolio.

KEN MORRISON

Kim Craiton should come clean

The Kim Craiton saga continues. Many unanswered questions remain regarding his resignation last year as the MPP for Niagara Falls. The resignation and subsequent by-election cost the taxpayers hundreds of thousands of dollars. We deserve an honest explanation.

One clear fact is that Premier Kathleen Wynne does not have the authority or power to force any member of the Ontario legislature to resign. But she can evict a member from her caucus. So why did Craiton resign?

He could have chosen to sit as an independent member. He could have crossed the floor to sit with one of the opposition parties. He did neither. He quit.

Kathleen Wynne's explanation, given the record of her veracity, also cannot be taken at face value. As politicians are always saying: come clean.

Hort society beautifying town

The NOTL Horticultural Society Plant Sale was held recently at the Virgil Arena, a fundraiser for the organization and an opportunity for residents to pick up plants to help beautify their gardens for the weekly Garden of the Week competition.

Thank you, Jean Cochrane

PENNY COLES/NIAGARA ADVANCE

At Tuesday's last meeting for the season of the NOTL Horticultural Society at the community centre, Jean Cochrane's years of writing a gardening column was recognized by the Niagara Advance and the horticultural society. Cochrane was given an engraved token of thanks and a bouquet of flowers presented by hort society president Maria Percy.

Weekend weather offered 'perfect scenario' for gardeners

It was a bit like the fabled Camelot in Niagara-on-the-Lake last weekend - sunny and hot during the days and then rained very nicely during the night, the perfect scenario for gardeners.

The new perennials are in and there is only one more flat of marigolds to go. But as I was looking for a spot for one of my perennials, I couldn't find any room, and noticed that I had many 'volunteers' about three inches high growing everywhere. At first I was excited because the goal is to get the plants to fill out so they don't need as much mulch and there are no bare spots. The problem was not knowing what this mystery plant was.

So I asked a more experienced garden neighbor, who laughed and told me I had about 40 Chinese Lanterns growing vigorously. How can that be, I wondered, and then I remembered. Last year I threw one in to see how it grew here in Niagara. I found out. Very well, it seems. I never got a bloom last year, but that was just to give me a false sense of security.

So I have been digging them out ever since. Two went to the neighbouring gardener, who has the sense to put them into a container. Should anyone else want the lovely lantern-shaped flowers for their fall arrangements, please let me know.

The early summer season always brings some surprises, and some are good, or at least not what you were expecting. Last season I planted an angelica plant, and, of course, it grew bigger than the spot I had allotted. It was a sad, floppy sort of plant, but I always have to give the stragglers a chance. This year it shot through the ground as if it were in a 100-yard dash.

It's four and half feet high and has the most amazing whorls of little green pods which I think will bloom, but I'll have to wait and see. I planted it because I have memories of eating candied angelica on a cake once. Silly of me, as I don't bake often and I hardly have time after gardening to fuss with little tiny things in sugar. Should you like to do this sort of thing, please let me know.

Not knowing what will come next is the thing that goes to interest in our gardens because you never have exactly the same thing from one year to the next.

Even those of you who are control freaks and try to maintain that 'look.' So there is always something new to contend with.

When I moved here, we immediately took out a dead crabapple tree and planted a Katsura tree because we had had one in Toronto and had grown very fond of it. We knew it took a couple of years to establish itself and then became a thing of wonder. Very pretty pinkish heart-shaped leaves in the spring turning to light green and then a dark rusty yellow in the fall.

Well, the second year, our little tree shrunk. So we set about making sure it was watered more, kept the grass away from the trunk, fertilized with mulch. The third year it was even smaller after we pruned for winter kill. More fertilizer in the form of plugs that you pound into the ground. This spring: dead.

We haven't had the heart to pull out the skinny little trunk yet. We are in mourning. This tree was going to provide shade for our deck, so we will have to replace it, but we need time. It's not good to be seen cowering at the garden centres so soon after a loved one dies.

Letter to the Editor

Check with relatives before sending money

I am writing to thank you for the article by Penny Coles on Donna Scott (Niagara Advance, May 19) and the scam she was a victim of after creating awareness.

We were shopping in St.

Catharines on Tuesday when I received a frantic call from my 88-year-old mother telling me that my daughter was in a serious accident on the 401 and was in jail for impaired driving causing bodily harm.

Because the call came from my mother and not knowing where her info was coming from, I instinctively went into a state of near panic. She gave me the name of the "lawyer" identifying himself as Sullivan and the number she had been given.

We moved from Calgary a year ago and I have kept my 403 cell number. When I called the number, the scammer must have recognized the area code and quickly adapted, thinking I am in Alberta. He proceeded to tell me, as in Donna's case, that my daughter had a broken arm, broken nose and was in jail (in Red Deer Alberta). They needed $3,000 for bail by 4 p.m. that day or she would be transferred to a detention centre. He was very convincing, well spoken and compelling. The switch to Alberta was his downfall.

As a former police member my spider sense was tingling. I would have known if my daughter had taken time off work and gone to Alberta. I played along hoping "Sullivan" would give me something I could work with as payment instructions.

Meanwhile my daughter was fine and at work here in Ontario. I tried delay tactics and bought time until the next day trying to get something that could lead to someone on the other end. He was too smart for that.

He wanted me to go to a Best Buy store and put $3,000 into Apple Cart. This is a cloud-based internet transfer and is untraceable. In the end I had to give up.

Please warn anyone you know that is vulnerable to this sort of scam. Be sure to check with relatives before sending any money to someone you do not know.

InfoHealth session to talk about e-health, web

These days many of us do our banking on-line, order books through Amazon and provide all manner of sensitive information to government agencies; think passports and Nexus cards. We're comfortable passing information to and fro with our accountants and financial consultants and while we have reason to be wary of malware and Identity theft, with caution we none-the-less plow ahead with our fingers crossed by updating our antivirus and malware software and creating increasingly impossible to remember passwords.

And so with the health care system. Despite the bonoologues associated with the entry of electronic records, they are with us for the foreseeable future. At least we can read the records, which is a great improvement over most physicians' scribes including my own. And no, we didn't take special notes on how to make our writing all but inscrutable.

BILL BROWN
From the health desk

So why does the health care system seem so reluctant to provide equal access to our health care records? When I practiced in the U.S. at the New England Medical Center (Now Tufts University Medical Center) we were encouraged keep in touch with our patients through e-mail. The great fear was that physicians would be overloaded with e-mails everyday and weekend. Surprisingly, that didn't happen. The vast majority of patients were quite responsible. Patients expected and received copies of their medical records when they asked including copies of whatever imaging studies were done. Makes sense doesn't it, provided the proper precautions are in place to make sure the information was only to the patient or someone legally designated to act into the wrong hands or lead to misunderstandings between patients and their physicians. Again this didn't happen.

There's more risk of eavesdropping with electronic records than in the old days of paper charts. Because anyone with access to those medical records - think nurses and doctors and some other staff - can access those records and do. There have been some cases of leaks of sensitive health care information on the health of celebrities through unwarranted access to e-records. And don't think that doesn't happen with ordinary patients such as you and I. Most searches are curiosity-fishing expeditions. At least in the old days you had to ask for a particular chart and unwarranted access was easier to pick up.

So why do Canadians have so much trouble accessing their medical records and their physicians? I believe it's a cultural problem. Canadian physicians and the health care system seem to believe Canadians can't be trusted with information about their health and have no right to the information in those medical records, except information provided by and filtered through their physicians. I don't believe that's in the best interests of Canadians. We should have the right to see and possess copies of our own health care records should we ask. Patients should be treated as partners in care, not dummies.

The whole InfoHealth program was predicated on the belief that the more patients know about their health, the better the decisions they can make about their health. We need to remember that it is our health that we're talking about and just as in the case of legal documents such as wills, powers of attorney and financial records; we have a right to the information we need to make responsible decisions about our health, whether financial, legal or medical.

What about searching the web for answers health care problems? I think it's a good idea. Some websites such as the National Institutes for Health (NIH), the Mayo Clinic and Johns Hopkins are excellent. The NIH provides details on the status of a wide variety of clinical trials worldwide. Johns Hopkins charges for some of their material but then again, they provide a lot more material than is the case for the Mayo clinic. Various societies in Canada such as the MS and Alzheimer's society are worthwhile but don't have the heft of the NIH or Johns Hopkins.

Come to the next InfoHealth session to learn about e-health and the web, Wednesday, June 8 at 1 p.m. at the NOTL Public Library.

Town to study need for more St. Davids crossing guards

SUZANNE MASON
Special to the Advance

St. Davids Public School may need more than one crossing guard with the increase in population of the Niagara-on-the-Lake community.

A consultant will be hired by the town to look into three potential new locations for crossing guards near the York Rd. elementary school and re-evaluate the existing crosswalk in front of the school. The last crossing guard study for the school was done in 2010.

The operations advisory committee approved spending $5,000 Monday for a consultant to evaluate the locations this month. The installation of new crossing guards, if necessary, would start in the fall at an estimated cost of $12,500 annually for each one.

Concerns about student safety with the increase in pedestrian and vehicle traffic prompted the formation of a school travel planning committee that includes representatives from the school board, parents, the town and the regional public health department.

Members of the travel planning committee walked the routes used by students near the school, then requested that the town do an updated study and consider adding more crossing guard locations.

"Student safety at intersections is a sensitive issue for both parents and the District School Board of Niagara," staff reported. "A majority of the student population at St. Davids Public School is below the age of 10, which is considered the threshold at which most children acquire the skills and judgement to safely cross an intersection."

Staff also reported that parents with children attending the school will be advised when the analysis will take place to ensure as many students as possible are counted in the statistics. A draft report on the study will come to the town and the school travel planning committee in late July.

Coun. Martin Mazza suggested the town do traffic studies on all of the elementary schools, noting an increase in students riding their bicycles during the warm weather to St. Michael Catholic Elementary School on Line 3.

Director of operations Sheldon Randall said most students are bused to school or driven by their parents, but if there are complaints about safety issues at any of the schools, the town will look into them.

Croquet to support Red Roof

PENNY COLS
Niagara Advance

Grab a teammate and a mallet, and get ready for fun at the the 7th annual Costumes and Croquet Tournament.

It's being held Sunday June 12, with some interesting changes to the event this year, including the location - it will be on the Village green, at the corner of Niagara Stone Road and Niven Road.

From noon until 3 p.m., participants will not only swing for bragging rights, but also to raise money for Red Roof Retreat.

Kevan O'Connor, organizer of the event, says participants are encouraged to wear white, and costumes only add to the fun. "We haven't pushed the costume aspect, but the more who do the better. It's just an added element of fun."

Awards will be given out for the best dressed, and in the past, says O'Connor, they've had Jackie O and Lady Gaga, Wilma Flinstone and Betty Rubble join them to play some croquet.

Last year the Kirkland Girls showed up in dresses made from Costco toilet paper, he said.

Rita Brown, retired as head of wardrobe, has volunteered to be a consultant in period croquet costumes for anyone looking for a little help, says O'Connor - she can be reached at rtbg@vaccine.com.

Prizes include an impressive trophy, entertainment, with awards for best dressed, best player and more. Registration is $30 per player (teams of two) and includes a drink token and picnic lunch, with proceeds for Red Roof Retreat.

It's a great event for families to watch or participate - children 10 years of age or older are welcome to play.

Many who attend have never played croquet before, said O'Connor. Participants don't have to be experienced - there will be coaches on hand to teach the newcomers.

In addition to money raised from the event, O'Connor is encouraging donations online, and is offering to match them up to $5,000.

It's his 45th anniversary in real estate, and to recognize the milestone he's trying to at least double last year's $10,000 raised at the croquet event, he said.

There will be six courts over four hours, with three matches each, he said. Winner will be determined by the average number of hoops scored per game.

Register online or half an hour before the event, but if you don't want to play, it will be fun to come out and watch, says O'Connor.

Red Roof is a local non-profit organization that provides quality respite and recreational programs to children, youth and adults with special needs in the Niagara Region. It provides special needs children with opportunities to take part in summer day camps, respite services for overnight, weekends and emergencies, daytime activities and educational day trips.

It is always fundraising to run the respite programs, so parents with special needs children can leave them in the care of trained professionals while they have a much needed break. There is no government funding for this, but a very high demand for the service in the Niagara Region.

Search and rescue volunteers take part in simulated emergency

RANDY KLAASSEN
Special to the Advance

Imagine trying to find a disabled boat from the air when the lake below is dotted with hundreds of fishermen and recreational boaters out on the water enjoying a beautiful weekend afternoon.

Air rescue volunteers, myself included, were busy this weekend with a simulated emergency that had us doing just that, as the busy outdoor season begins.

Working with the military, civilian volunteers were preparing and training for rescue and recovery operations from mishaps that could occur from the air, land or water.

This weekend's training consisted of a simulated situation of a disabled boat combined with a medical complication of a person on board — someone was apparently suffering a heart attack, turning the rescue into a matter of life and death.

I'm a (delete additional "a") member of the volunteer non-profit Civil Air Rescue Emergency Services (CARES) Niagara, based at Niagara District Airport. The training exercise was to practice a joint operation with military personnel from the Department of National Defence 424 Squadron from Trenton, along with Canadian Coast Guard and Coast Guard Auxiliary members.

Niagara-on-the-Lake's Terry Nord, our CARES search coordinator, noted the importance of operations between the various agencies this weekend, "as each brings unique professional skills to the task of rescuing those who find themselves in trouble."

This particular exercise at the beginning of the search and rescue season was to test the resources of both the marine and air operations to be prepared for when calls for help arise.

Our simulated call came Saturday morning from Trenton to tell us of a boat with no power on Lake Erie, and someone aboard with the medical emergency.

Some of our new members flew out from Niagara District Airport with the military personnel on board the Hercules.

I was one of two spotters, along with a navigator and pilot, in the Cessna 337, a plane specifically designed for search and rescue missions during the Vietnam War, and still used around the world.

Our operation took place with coast guard marine vessels Sandman III, Port Colborne Marine Rescue (POCOMAR I & II), the coast guard's Cape Rescue and crew based in Port Dover, and the coast guard's mid-shore patrol vessel Private Robertson V.C.

As we searched we were told by the search coordinator to locate the source of a radio distress signal from the disabled boat, and as we got closer a green dye marker in the water was spotted to confirm the distressed boat.

As part of the training mission, the Hercules was able to drop a radio pack to the boat in distress, dropping it at the end of a 600-foot line while traveling about 140 kilometers an hour, right on the bow of the boat. They nailed it perfectly.

At that point, the Hercules received an actual distress call and was directed to leave the area, and once the coast guard boat pulled up alongside the supposed disabled boat on Lake Erie to complete the rescue, we returned to Niagara District Airport.

The simulated emergency was carried out again Sunday, this time on Lake Ontario, with local volunteers again on board the Hercules training as auxiliary spotters, working with Hamilton Beach Rescue, Grimsby Rescue, Oakville Marine Rescue, the coast guard's Cape Storm and the crew from Port Weller and the coast guard's Corporal Thatcher.

Canadian Coast Guard auxiliary training co-ordinator Ryan Glaves says "The important message for boaters this time of year is to remember that while the air may be warm, waters remain cold." For information on cold water immersion visit the web site <http://csbc.ca/en/cold-water-awareness>.

These costly training exercises and the work of CARES, a non-profit organization, is funded in part by the Department of National Defence, but donations are always welcome to offset the costs not covered by the government. For more information email cares@slastimet.ca or call 905 684-0406.

RANDY KLAASSEN/SPECIAL TO THE ADVANCE

CARES Niagara members Glenn Osmond, Ron Turnbull, Steve Bull, Jeremy Hetherington, Joany Burtinsky, and Werner Siemens participated in this weekend's search and rescue training operations, including working with the military in a Hercules out of Trenton.

New academy looking for host homes

PENNY COLES
Niagara Advance

The Royal Elite International Academy is looking for people in Niagara-on-the-Lake who might be willing to host a high school student from another country.

The students who attend the academy are coming to Canada not only for an education, but to learn about Canadian culture, says Jade Winterbottom, the accommodation co-ordinator of the academy.

"We want to give our students an unforgettable experience," she says.

She is looking for people with an extra bedroom who are interested in earning up to $1,200 a month.

She's hoping, before school opens in September, to find up to 40 families to host students.

Some are likely to be families with other kids, who would also benefit from learning about the culture of the visiting student.

Others might be seniors who would welcome the company of a young person, and who are also interested in learning about a different culture.

Royal Elite is offering a special tuition of $5,000 for local students wanting to attend, and hosting an international student would mean "your student could get a post-secondary school education for free. It's a great opportunity for local kids, and the students get to know each other, and are likely to develop friendships that will last the rest of their lives."

Anyone who is interested in hosting a student can fill out an application, and Winterbottom will meet with them in their homes.

Host families are not responsible for providing transportation to the school - Royal Elite is trying to find homes on the NOTL bus route, or within walking distance of it.

If that doesn't work out, it's possible a shuttle might be part of the transportation plan, but that's a detail to be worked out when families have a better idea of where host families are located, she said.

To talk to Winterbottom about hosting a student call 905-938-0132, or email jade.winterbottom@royalelite.ca.

Fostering an Environment for Economic Prosperity

Get Involved in Niagara's Future: Attend Public Information Centre #2

In the next 25 years, Niagara is expected to grow, bringing a possible 168,000 new residents and 79,000 new jobs to the region.

Niagara Region is making sure we're prepared for this growth through three projects that will help us plan where and how that growth will occur, and how it will be accommodated.

HOW WE GROW:

The Municipal Comprehensive Review will look at the land we have available across Niagara, and will ensure we have enough to sustain our expected growth to the year 2041. It will also examine how that land is distributed throughout Niagara.

HOW WE FLOW:

The Water and Wastewater Master Servicing Plan will ensure Niagara has the infrastructure to provide critical water and wastewater services to our growing region in a sustainable and financially responsible way.

HOW WE GO:

The Transportation Master Plan will look at how we currently travel in and around Niagara and how we can improve our transportation systems, including options for walking, cycling and public transit, to better serve Niagara's future needs.

GET INVOLVED:

Residents are invited to attend a Public Information Centre in their community to learn how each of these projects contribute to Niagara's overall growth plan for the next 25 years, and how you can have your voice heard.

The Transportation and Water and Wastewater studies follow the Master Plan process as outlined in Section A.2.7 of the Municipal Engineers Association (MEA) Municipal Class Environmental Assessment (Oct. 2000, as amended in 2007 and 2011). The Master Plan will be filed under Approach #2 of the MEA Class EA Approach for Master Planning. The Master Servicing Plan will satisfy the planning requirements for Schedule A, A+ and select Schedule B projects and provide the basis for future investigations of identified Schedule B and C projects.

Niagara Health Coalition volunteers Sandra O'Connor and Elvira Stegmüller helped conduct a vote that was taking place at the NOTL community centre Saturday, and across the province, asking Ontario residents whether they want hospital cuts to continue or be stopped.

Niagara residents want health cuts stopped

ALLAN BENNER
Postmedia Network

Of 4,646 Niagarans who cast ballots in an unofficial referendum Saturday, almost all voted to save local hospitals.

Niagara Health Coalition released local data Monday, with 4,614 people voting in favour of stopping health-care cuts across Ontario, including planned closure of hospitals in Welland, Port Colborne and Fort Erie.

Only 27 people voted against ending provincial cuts to hospital services. Five voters spoiled their ballots.

"We're pleased with the results," said Niagara Health Coalition chair Sue Hotte, adding revised local numbers will also be released Tuesday as well.

All in all, we're really pleased. With the resources that we had we've done really well," she said, adding about 60 volunteers worked long and hard to run the referendum.

"The people who worked, the volunteers — I can't say enough for them," Hotte said.

But she suspects if more people had been available to run polling stations in other areas, the number of votes could have been far higher.

She said advance polls were set up during the past three weeks, and on Saturday polling stations were located throughout much of Niagara, including the community centre in Niagara-on-the-Lake, Welland, Fort Erie, Niagara Falls, Thorold, St. Catharines, Pelham, Port Colborne and Wainfleet.

"Wherever we had the polls, we had good responses."

Hotte said the results of the referendum make it "very evident that the continuous lack of adequate funding to our health systems" is having an impact — especially in south Niagara.

"St. Catharines and Niagara Falls hospitals will be hard-pressed to meet the increasing pressure on the services that they offer," she said. "In the end all residents in Niagara are affected."

Existing Niagara-on-the-Lake Wastewater Treatment Plant
& Lagoons (located at 1738 Lakeshore Rd.) Decommissioning
Coordinated Federal/Provincial Environmental Assessment

The Study

Niagara Region previously completed a Coordinated Federal/Provincial Environmental Assessment (EA) to facilitate design and construction of the new Niagara-on-the-Lake (NOTL) Wastewater Treatment Plant (WWTP). As part of the previous EA, the Region committed to carry out a subsequent Coordinated Federal/Provincial EA for the decommissioning of the existing NOTL WWTP (including the lagoons) located at 1738 Lakeshore Rd., in the Town of Niagara-on-the-Lake.

The objectives of the study are to:

- Complete a Coordinated Federal/Provincial EA;
- Evaluate alternatives for decommissioning the existing WWTP and lagoons;
- Assess potential effects associated with the project including any cumulative environmental effects; and,
- Provide opportunities for the general public, Aboriginal communities/organizations, and external agencies to participate in the planning and decision-making process.

The Process

The project is being planned in accordance with Schedule B of the Municipal Class Environmental Assessment. Upon completion of the study, a Project File Report will be prepared to fulfill both the federal and provincial EA requirements and made available for a minimum 30-day public/agency review period.

Public Information Centre

Public Consultation is a key component of this study. This PIC will be an informal session to allow staff from Niagara Region and Hatch (consulting engineer) to provide an update on recent activities, and to present and receive input on the:

- Alternative Solutions; and,
- Evaluation and Identification of the Preliminary Preferred Solution.

The PIC will follow an "Open House" format with information on display and members of the project team on hand to discuss any questions or concerns you may have.

Public Information Centre No. 2 will be held:

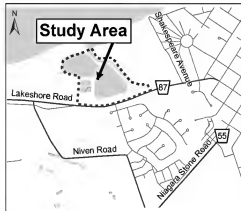

Date: Wednesday, June 8, 2016

Time: 6-8 p.m.

Location: Niagara-on-the-Lake
Community Centre
14 Anderson Lane
Niagara-on-the-Lake, L0S 1J0

PENNY GOLES

What could be more enjoyable than spending an evening outside under the stars, surrounded by friends and neighbors while watching a movie?

The Niagara Historical Society and Museum is offering movies in its courtyard with its Five and Dime Film and Music Series, every Monday night at dusk, beginning this Monday and running for six weeks.

"People love to watch movies, and at this time of year they love being outside. Outdoor movies are becoming very popular," says organizer Barbara Worthy.

"It's a really nice way to experience a different kind of sensual environment. It's summer, it's outside and it's great entertainment."

"Niagara audiences have proven how much they enjoy a good film and great music," says Amy Klassen, Niagara Historical Society administrator, "and this series offers something to make you laugh, cry and learn a little. Each week has a different theme, from honoring our veterans with our opening D-Day specials, to a classic film noir night."

The first film evening is June 6, and will honor our D-Day by featuring the 1970 award-winning documentary Good Times Bad Times by veteran filmmaker Don Shebib, who will be at the museum for the evening to talk about his career in the film industry.

On June 13 the series will feature We Are Children.

Says Klassen, "This is perhaps the most moving film I've ever seen that depicts the realities of residential school survivors. It's extremely well done, and packs an emotional punch—a film I think everyone should see."

The evening will be rounded out with native drumming, singing, and speakers.

For avid film noir fans, Monday June 20 will feature Ida Lapino's classic The Hitch-hiker, so be prepared for a classic thriller. "No screaming allowed," says Klassen.

On Monday, June 27 the evening is dedicated to local independent film-makers. Andrea Conti's award-nominated short documentary on black history, The Echoes of Chloe Cooley, featuring historian Wilma Morrison, will kick off the night, followed by Owen Bjorgen's video Trail of Life and his journey on the Bruce Trail.

The series is also highlighting several documentary shorts, courtesy of Niagara Integrated Film Festival from their 2016 festival. In a real coup, the evening prelude will feature multi-nominated and Juno award-winning musician Harrison Kennedy, a Hamilton native, and appearing June 27 courtesy of Bravo Niagara.

And as it's summer, everyone needs a good laugh. So July 4 is comedy night with Being Canadian, Robert Cohen's comic routine on the "about what it means to be Canadian, (with a nod to Rick Mercer's What Americans say about Canada) for a belly laugh of Canadian reflections.

The final week, July

Award-winning filmmaker Don Shebib will be at the Niagara Historical Museum June 6 to talk about his D-Day documentary, Good Times Bad Times.

11, will focus on South America, timely with the upcoming Olympics. It will feature a question and answer period with Brock University professor Maria Del Carmen Suescun Pozas, highlighting her Seedling for Change in History Research Collective.

Each week the movies are accompanied by a short musical prelude, reflecting the theme of the night, as well as honoring other local cultural festivals – Niagara Jazz Festival, with Juliet Dunn and Peter Shea, Bravo Niagara! and Music Niagara will all promote.

Viewings will be in the museum's courtyard, 43 Castlereagh St.

Audiences are encouraged to bring comfy chairs, their own refreshments, and a dime for popcorn. Admission is by donation (suggested $5).

The Five and Dime Film and Music Series will kick off around 8:30 p.m., so come early, get comfortable, grab some popcorn and enjoy the movie before the movie begins.

Two years ago, Kevan Sherlock was able to take the medal belonging to his great-great-grandfather John Thornton to St. Mark's Cemetery and rest it on his grave.

NIAGARA HISTORICAL MUSEUM COLLECTION

Medal returned to family

KEVAN SHERLOCK
Special to the Advance

Three years ago, on May 20, 2013,

I noticed on Ancestry that someone was researching the Thornton family of Niagara.
Wondering whether they might be able to help with my own research of my great-grandmother Ethel Thornton's (1884-1989) family, I made contact via the Ancestry

Message Centre.

It turned out that the researcher was a gentleman medal collector who had come into the possession of my great-great-grandfather John George Thornton's Canada General Service Medal for serving in No 1 Company Niagara Volunteers during the 1866 Fenian Raid.

Bingo! A treasure for any family historian, but would he be willing to part with it?

"I'm not interested in parting with it as medals to the 19th Militia are quite collectable. I appreciate your interest."

A bit naive, I guess, to think that a collector would like to see a family treasure repatriated to the family.

Fast forward a year to September 2014 and I thought I would knock on the door again, with a formal offer, as our youngest daughter and I prepared to fly from Auckland to Niagara for a family wedding.

A reply came through during our holdover in Vancouver: "Thank you for your email. Clearly you are genuinely interested in having this medal. If your offer is sincere and we can facilitate a straightforward exchange while you are in the area, then I will consider your request and make it available to you."

Yes! Prayers answered.

The collector and I met in Niagara on Sept. 14 to transact our deal and, the following day, I was able to take the medal to St Mark's and rest it on my GGGGrandfather's grave.

"There is no place like home."

Kevan Sherlock is a NOTL native living in New Zealand. His story about his great-great-grandfather's medal has a part two - last month, his mother delivered it to the Niagara Historical Museum, with a request it be formally accepted into its collection on the 150th anniversary of No. 1 Company responding to the Fenian Raid at Fort Erie. As a post script, Sherlock adds, "John Thornton Jr. was responsible for many brick constructions in Niagara during his life, including the pump house. His father, John Sr. was master mason on the town hall (the Court House) and public school builds."

Who will you walk for?

Join us on June 4th to end violence against women and girls.

Thunderhawks defeat Welland Generals 11-9

BERNO FRANK
POSTMEDIA NETWORK

The Niagara-on-the-Lake Thunderhawks netted two unanswered goals into an empty net Sunday in Welland with two seconds remaining in regulation for an 11-9 victory.

Niagara's Mike Mines was the high scorer for the T-hawks with seven points. Keelan Buis allowed six goals on 18 shots; and Tyson McCool, three goals on 14 shots, sharing goaltending duties for Niagara. McCool earned the victory.

Zach Luis scored four goals; James Stenzel, two; Zac Dubuc, Hunter Lemelux, Isaac Vanderzalm, Saul Vanderzalm and John Wagner found the back of the net for the Thunder-hawks who returned to the win column following a 10-9 loss at home the night before to the Orangeville Northmen.

Niagara, which outshot the Generals 51-32 and finished the game 2-for-5 on the power play, improved to 2-0 versus Welland this season and to 9-3 overall.

The T-Hawks were able to gain ground on the Six Nations Rebels in the race to finish the regular season first in the South West Division. Only three points separate Niagara and 10-1 Six Nations, which was upset 8-7 by the St. Catharines Spartans on the road Sunday night.

Niagara has two games in hand and is scheduled to play the Rebels twice before league play wraps up in mid-June.

Tennis season begins

PHOTOS SUBMITTED

About 70 members of the NOTL Tennis Club at Memorial Park turned out for the first major event of the year - the club's Spring Social, held Saturday with great weather, some excellent tennis and a wonderful opportunity for members to re-connect after the winter. Left, Nancy Berkhout and Gerry McIlhorne show tennis can be fun. Highlights of the afternoon included a special session on pre-game warm-ups and stretching exercises, on-court tennis instruction and drills, great raffle prizes and a catered dinner under the club's pavilion. With almost 50 new members the club is looking forward to an outstanding year.

MOGGIDGE, Vivian Ruth - Peacefully at Kirtwood Park, Picton on Monday March 21st, 2016. Vivian Moggidge, formerly of Niagara-on-the-Lake, at the age of 81. Beloved wife of the late Robert Loved mother of Geoffrey and his wife Cheryl of Milford, Ontario, Geoffrey and his partner William Bloor of Salt Spring Island, B.C. and Hollie of Picton, Ontario. Proud grandma of Jason, Lexi and Joya. Vivian was active in the art prints and printing industries, shoreline preservation through the International Joint Commission, and Community events/fundraising in Niagara-on-the-Lake for many years. Fondly known as "the Viv", she also enjoyed gardening, walking her dog, made legendary pies, and had a knack for captivating an audience with her stories. In later years, a decline in health took her away from her beloved Niagara to be closer to family. She will be interred, along with her beloved husband Robert, at Victoria Lawn Cemetery in St. Catharines, Ontario, on Friday, June 3, 2016 at 1:30 p.m. All family, friends and acquaintances are invited to attend and instructed to meet at the cemetery gates on 480 Queenston Road at 1:30. Immediately following the ceremony will be a gathering at St. Giles Presbyterian Church, 205 Lincolnton Road, St. Catharines. If desired, donations in memory of Vivian may be directed to the Canadian Association for Porphyria.

PERETTO, Angelo (Al) - Passed away peacefully with dignity and immense courage, with his family by his side, at the St. Catharines hospital on May 21, 2 days after his 81st birthday. He was preceded by his beloved wife Mary (2007) and his siblings Florence and Michael. Al is survived by his loving daughter Nina (Elita) Slack & devoted grandchildren Emily and Jennifer (Jennifer). He was a proud veteran, having served as a Communications Operator with the Canadian Armed Forces in Europe during WWII. Al retired from the St. Lawrence Seaway in 1980 after a distinguished career. He was an avid Blue Jays fan and a lifelong resident of Onondaga (where in his retirement years he tended his garden and grapes and enjoyed making wine in the summer and travelling with Mary to Florida in the winter). The family wishes to thank the dedicated and caring staff of Chateaufort Niagara (Chateaufort Gardens) where he lived for the last 9 months and the compassionate staff of the NHS - St. Catharines Site (ER and 3B). As per Al's wishes, cremation has taken place. Arrangements entrusted to PASSFIELD MORTUARY SERVICES, 905-682-0474. His immediate family invited extended family and friends to the Fellowship Hall of Westminster United Church, 180 Queenston St. on Saturday, May 28 1-3 p.m. A service to celebrate Al's life took place at 2 p.m. If desired, donations to Westminster United Church, the Rankin Cancer Run or the Royal Canadian Legion, Branch 24 (Poppy Fund) are appreciated by the family. Online condolences can be made at www.passfieldmortuary.ca

Sailing club teaches juniors, adults

PENNY COLES
Niagara Advance

Joe Salter and Levi Harper, two instructors with the Niagara-on-the-Lake Sailing Club, have no problem coming up with reasons why they love to sail.

Their enthusiasm is catching, their knowledge and experience extensive, and it's easy to see why they enjoy teaching youngsters and adults to sail.

Salter has just graduated from McMaster University where he studied biochemistry. Harper is at Brock in a recreation and leisure program, and both are pretty happy about spending their days, even if they are long days, on the water.

For kids aged nine to 16, sailing classes are five days a week, eight hours a day, getting them out of their basements and away from electronic toys, into the sunshine and learning a healthy activity, a sport that is good for their mental and physical development.

"If their parents don't sail, they might not realize it involves a lot of strategy, a lot of technique. You're constantly thinking," said Salter.

And it's a great excuse to get out on the water. It's good for people who like to be challenged by a sport.

"It's something you can do for the rest of your life," adds Harper, who learned to sail through the NOTL junior sailing program when he was a kid.

There is some land training involved, so the instructors watch the weather and plan accordingly, explained David Rourke, the director of the Learn to Sail program, although there aren't usually that many days that students can't get out on the water, he said. When that happens, most often when there's no wind, "we have land lessons. We try to keep them engaged."

There are also adult classes, for beginners to advanced. The youth program runs in two four-week sessions, July and August, and the group adult program has series of classes that begin in May and run to September, two nights a week, in three-week sessions.

The club uses two types of boats for the junior sailing program: the RS Feva for the beginner sailors and the International 420 for the more advanced students, says Salter, and the advanced sailors participate

Joe Salter and Levi Harper are the instructors for this year's Learn to Sail program, for kids ages nine to 16, and for adults, at the NOTL Sailing Club.

In 420 sailing regattas across Ontario.

The adult classes, taught on Sharks, are new for the club, says Rourke, made possible through the donation of some boats. It's a good way for people to jump into the sport before putting out money on a boat, and while they're learning, they will also be able to pick up tips on what to buy and how much to spend, he said.

"It's a sport that can be as expensive or as inexpensive as you want it to be, and it's a great activity for families."

Parents who are looking for something to keep their kids busy might be surprised to know sailing lessons are a reasonable cost when compared to a babysitter or other summer activities, said Rourke.
